

DIALOGUE WITH THE STONES

ENCOUNTERS AND TRANSFORMATIONS OF ELDERLY AND YOUNG

Project created by Joan Lluís i Rabassó

INTRODUCTION: A major obstacle to peace is the growing inequality that exists between the different groups in our society, such as that between the elderly and the young, between East and West,...

OBJECTIVE: This project proposes and develops an innovative idea to improve intergenerational solidarity and intercultural dialogue by using the game of go as a mediation tool between those groups that, for different reasons, are at odds with each other.

STRATEGY: Both contestants have space on the board to occupy. The best strategies in go involves a dynamic exercise of giving and taking, to gain a foothold in space own, taking into account that the adversary will also get a space of his. This exercise can help to become aware that society can be considered as a net of relationships, in which people and groups are inserted, giving own to receive what they need.

The interdisciplinary approach allows professionals to enrich each other with their own experiences and experiences, improve their daily work and more easily reach the therapeutic and educational objectives that have been set in their respective centers.

It is significant to see how an initiative with such a low economic cost is able to generate so many benefits among the participants

METHODOLOGY:

- Explain the go game.
- Develop some games.
- Assess the transformation process.

BENEFITS: Inherent in go is the idea that, beyond conflicts, everyone has the right to exist. It is possible to claim one's own space by appealing, not to the destruction of what the other intends, but to negotiation with him. In this sense that go, as a strategy game, contributes decisively to the development of strategies for coexistence. For all these reasons, playing go not only has an educational and therapeutic value, but at the same time it helps those who practice it to have friends and to be connected to healthier realities, improving the social cohesion of the communities where it is practiced.

Go, the game of peace

If we have taken as a starting premise that in the game of war the only way to win is not play it, we can come to understand that in the game of peace the only way to win is not to stop playing it.
